Projects:

Pocket Therapist: Full-Stack Development

Pocket Therapist is an AI-driven chatbot designed to offer personalized therapeutic support through engaging conversations.

Tools: Botkit, Botbuilder, WebSocket, MongoDB, React, Dotenv, Bootstrap, OpenAI, Git, JavaScript

Data Pipeline:

Back-End Development

This application demonstrates a straightforward data pipeline that integrates data from an external API into an outside database. The API used is ExerciseDB, developed by Justin and hosted on RapidAPI. The data is first cleaned to ensure accuracy and consistency, and then stored in a database.

Tools: Sequelize, Postgress, Express, Dotenv, Pg, Git, JavaScript, Python

Machine Learning Players Model:

Full-Stack Development

This project involves collecting player data using web scraping in JavaScript. Using Puppeteer, web pages are scraped to gather player information and statistics. The data is then stored in a PostgreSQL database for organization and easy retrieval. In parallel, Python is employed to interact with the NBA API to fetch detailed game statistics. With the combined datasets, a regression model is built using Python libraries such as Scikit-Learn, Matplotlib, Seaborn, and Pandas. These tools allow for data analysis, visualization, and predictive modeling of player performance based on various features and game statistics

Tools: JavaScript, Python, Dotenv, Postgres, Git
